

La. Nobilis.

The Double Montagne is a variety of this Peach, that the French have grafted on plum stock. It is highly valued by the French Nurserymen, and is rated, under those names, in the works on the subject, in consequence of its growth, and a very large, expanded leaf. The leaf generally about 4 inches long, green, deeply serrated, sometimes a little notched at the end of it; beautiful when much exposed to the sun, and yellowish shades in the shade, but, perhaps, less so. The flesh is off from the flesh, and is to be rather woolly. The skin, it is, in very fine. Stone short in proportion.
